What's your name? It's a simple question you've probably been asked hundreds of times, but have you ever really had to think about it? For the 420,000 South Koreans living in Japan, it's not such a simple question. Like my father, I am a South Korean born and raised in Hiroshima. My grandfather and father's generations used Japanese-style names to hide that they are Korean because of discrimination in Japan. The history of discrimination and hate-speech continues today and there are still people hiding their names. Just two years ago, the Asahi Newspaper published data indicating that an average of almost 30% of Japanese people had a negative image of Korea. This has to change. If we understand each other, I think discrimination will decrease.

Maybe I'd have more influence if I were a K-pop star, but I'm doing what I can as a student. To promote Korean culture, I have joined Hiroshima's Japanese-Korean Friendship Exchange Event and the "Flower Festival", Hiroshima's biggest festival. At the Flower Festival, about 100 of my fellow Koreans and friends join the parade wearing "Hanbok", traditional Korean clothing. Seeing people smile and wave to us makes us all march with a smile. I was disappointed that the parade was cancelled twice because of COVID-19, but I hope my friends
